He has a Ph.D. in statistics from Charles University and an undergraduate degree in probability theory from Charles University.

ROBERT JAHODA

Robert Jahoda has been working at Masaryk University since 2000 at the Faculty of Economics and Administration, where he completed his habilitation in the field of Public Economics in 2014. In addition to his participation in teaching, he is the guarantor of the master's degree program in Public Finance and Economics. In his professional life, he deals with the issues of Czech pension policy and family policy. Part-time work at the Research Institute of Labour and Social Affairs enables him to participate in research into the impacts of broader reform measures of Czech social policy. His research activities are reflected in original contributions to domestic and international journals, in the co-authoring of several monographs and numerous presentations at scientific conferences and professional seminars. In 2015-2018, Robert Jahoda was a member of the Commission for Family Policy, established by the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, where he participated in the creation of the Family Policy Concept. He has been a member of the Commission for Fair Pensions since 2019. Furthermore, since 2014 he participates at work of the European Social Policy Network, which was established to provide independent information and analysis in the field of national social policies for the European Commission. He publishes the results of his research in academic journals and popularizes them at numerous seminars organized, for example, by the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.
